The Judsons worked with intensity to learn the Burmese language. They were eager to begin translating the Bible. Adoniram gave instrucstion in God's Word to those who would listen.

War broke out between Great Britain and Burma. Adoniram was accused of being a spy and was put into prison. The Judsons' home was searched, but Ann had hidden the pages of the translation of the Burmese New Testament. Later she hid the pages inside a pillow and took it to her husband in prison. The pages were not visable since Adoniram kept them in his pillow.

Adoniram was moved to a second prison and the pillow was left behind. A servant found the pillow and later was able to return the pillow to the Judsons. God would not permit His Word to be lost. After Adoniram's release from prison, he worked to provide a translation of the entire Bible in Burmese. He also wrote a Burmese-English dictionary before he died in 1850. In God's providense, a young atheist became a believer who took the gospel to the people of Burma.
