William Carey

Name _____

In 1761 William Carey was born in England. While attending a village school, he became interested in science, reading, and languages. Over time Carey taught himself Greek, Latin, and several other languages. He worked as a shoemaker, a teacher, and a preacher before God called him to serve as a missionary to India.

In 1793 Carey arrived with his wife and young children in Calcutta, India. He labored faithfully, often in poverty, for seven years before the first Indian accepted Christ. In 1800 he helped establish the Serampore Mission Church. He is known as the Father of Modern Missions.

Carey also wrote dictionaries and started a college. He worked to end unjust practices among the Indian people. With Carey's help and direction, the Bible was translated into dozens of languages and Indian dialects. Over the years, he endured financial difficulties, disease, loneliness, and the deaths of several close family members. He died in 1834, having never returned to England. The quotation that summarizes his life is "Expect great things from God. Attempt great things for God."
