Day 1

A Closer Look

- ▶ The Pattern Word historical is an example of a derivation formed by adding a second suffix. The Student Worktext page gives both the base word history and the derivation historic to help the student see how the related word historical is formed.

Derivational Suffixes al, ic

- ▶ Display Derivational Suffixes part A. Read the words together.
- ▶ Ask a student to write each base word.

What suffix has been added to both base words? ic

The derivational suffix ic means “of, relating to, or having the characteristics of.” Which word means “having the characteristics of an athlete”? athletic

Did the spelling of either base word change when the suffix was added? yes What change was made? The final e in athlete was dropped before the suffix was added.

- ▶ Reveal part B. Read the words together.
- ▶ Invite a student to write each base word.

What suffix has been added to each base word? al

The suffix al also means “of, relating to, or having the characteristics of.” Which word means “of or related to nature”? natural

What spelling change was made to nature? The final e was dropped.

What spelling change was made to memory? The letter y was changed to i.

Did the spelling of hymn change? no What difference do you notice in the pronunciation of the base word? The letter n is pronounced in hymnal, but it is silent in hymn.

- ▶ Explain to the students that remembering the pronounced n in hymnal helps them remember to include the silent n in hymn.
